Expert Tips for Ensuring your Air Cargo is Secured Quickly and Efficiently Without Flight Delays

In an era of just-in-time inventory management, delays in cargo due to security screening will be highly disruptive – and very costly. In this case study you will learn how MASSPORT envisions the smooth integration of 100% air cargo security screening with minimal disruption to aircraft schedules. The process is technology agnostic so the proposed solutions readily adapt to any federal screening standard.

- Discover how to choose the most appropriate screening model
- Learn how to avoid the pitfall of time spent resolving false sensor hits
- What do you do with a shrink-wrapped, weighed, balanced, air cargo pallet at the airport that you now think may have an explosive somewhere in the middle of it? Hear expert tips on how to deal with security screening a wide variety of cargo types expertly.

• While others' cargo either misses or delays the plane, this session will teach you the strategies for being secure, on time and in the air while your competition is left behind
Dennis Treece - Director of Corporate Security - Massport

PRESENTATION

Master the Art of Anti-Terrorism Technologies, Cargo Security, and the SAFETY Act

Following the 9/11 terrorist attacks many companies felt discouraged from developing and deploying anti-terrorism technologies and services due to the significant liability exposure they would likely face if a future act of terrorism were to occur. As a result, Congress enacted the SAFETY Act to provide critical incentives for the development and deployment of anti-terrorism technologies and services by providing risk management and litigation management protections to providers of qualified anti-terrorism solutions. This session will teach you how to:

- Get to grips with the Department of Homeland Security's implementation of the SAFETY Act with expert advice specific to cargo security professionals
- Hear practical information covering each of the steps in the application process, including the type of information required to be submitted, the different types of protections, and the process timeline
- Take advantage of a complete summary of approved products and services

Bruce Davidson - Deputy Director, Office of SAFETY Act Implementation - DHS

Cargo and supply chain security is now widely acknowledged as being a matter of collaboration between all players in the transportation and logistics industry.

All stakeholders have the same ultimate goal – the professional, safe and economical transportation of cargo from its point of departure right through to its final destination.

“Collaboration is the key” declare the industry’s thought leaders, many of whom will be at the 6th eyefortransport North American Cargo Security Forum in Washington DC, on December 5th and 6th.

This is the one event you can’t afford to miss – where the industry’s most respected leaders and government representatives will discuss the latest security regulations & standards.

International supply chains are plagued by disparate industry standards and business practices in different countries, and constantly changing government regulations that are updated to outpace – and hopefully outwit – increasingly innovative criminals.

Collaboration is the key when it comes to developing industry standards and best practices. On a domestic level, this is where shippers, carriers ports, etc, can collaborate to push these standards and best practices. On an international level, governments can aim for a set of homogeneous security directives.

6 years after 9/11, security still remains a priority – highlighted by recent tragic events across the globe. But the key for the industry is the ability to make security investment part of a long-term vision – to improve operational efficiency, increase visibility and safe guard goods with out sending prices through the roof.

Compliance is no longer just another expence on the balance sheet. 'Return on investment' is the Holy Grail and the entire industry is now realising the benefits of implementing additional security measures: safer and consequently more efficient supply chains. Fewer distrupctions and incidents of theft means reduced losses and increased profits - for all concerned.

Compliance also has its advantages when it comes to customs procedures, a recent eyefortransport survey revealed that while 46% of respondents believed that meeting US government regulations is a top priority for security reasons, 42% proritised this as a means to accelerate the movement of goods. Now in its sixth year, eyefortransport’s North American Cargo Security Forum is one of the industries premier annual events attracting up to 200 senior industry executives.

Join your peers in DC to discuss security strategies and best practices, and find out how other companies are reaping rewards from their security investments!!

In an enviroment where risks have escalated sharply in a few short years, those who fail to capitalize on the experience of specialists who have invested heavily in risk analysis stand to lose out dearly.
